Buried WESTERN TREASURE

ONE OF THE MOST NOTORIOUS OUTLAW GANGS OF THE 1860'S WAS LED BY JOHN AND JIM REYNOLDS-- A BAND OF 24 MEN WHO ATTACKED AND PLUNDERED WAGON TRAINS ON THE SANTA FE TRAIL!

GOOD SHOOTIN'-- NOW LET'S GIT THOSE MONEY-BOXES!

WITH A LOOT OF $40,000 IN CURRENCY AND OVER $10,000 IN GOLD DUST, THE BANDITS RODE UP THE ARKANSAS, WAYLAYING TRAVELERS, ROBBING RANCHERS, AND HOLDING UP STAGECOACHES-- AND THEN, IN SOUTH PARK, COLORADO, THE REYNOLDS GANG MADE THEIR BIGGEST HAUL AS THEY SMASHED THEIR WAY INTO A WELLS FARGO STAGE STATION!

QUICK, OPEN THEM VAULTS-- THAR MUST BE A FORTUNE IN GOLD DUST STASHED AWAY THAR!

HAVING GATHERED AN UNTOLD FORTUNE IN GOLD DUST, THE BANDITS RODE DOWN THE NORTH FORK OF THE SOUTH PLATTE AND CAMPED IN A THICK GROVE OF PINE TREES NEAR THE MOUTH OF GENEVA CREEK!

A DOZEN DIFFERENT POSSES ARE SCOURIN' THE WOODS FER US! WE'D BETTER GO UP THE CREEK AND BURY ALL THIS LOOT-- WE KIN COME BACK FER IT WHEN THE HEAT'S OFF!

BUT WHILE JOHN REYNOLDS WAS OUT BURYING THE GANG'S PLUNDER...

JOHN REYNOLDS ALONE ESCAPED-- BUT MONTHS LATER, WHEN HE WAS RETURNING TO DIG UP THE TREASURE WITH ANOTHER DESPERADO NAMED BROWN, A MOUNTAINEER RECOGNIZED THE FAMED OUTLAW!

BROWN SHOT THE MOUNTAINEER-- BUT REYNOLDS WAS MORTALLY WOUNDED! AS HE LAY DYING, REYNOLDS REVEALED THE SECRET OF THE BURIED TREASURE!

YUH GO UP A LITTLE WAYS ALONG GENEVA CREEK-- AN' AT THE HEAD O' THE GULCH, TURN TUH THE RIGHT AN' FOLLOW THE MOUNTAIN AROUND TUH THE HEAD O' DEER CREEK! I... I BURIED ALL THE GOLD DUST AND THE $40,000 IN GREEN-BACKS, WRAPPED IN SILK OIL CLOTH, IN AN OLD PROSPECT HOLE AT ABOUT TIMBERLINE! THEN I FILLED THE HOLE UP WITH STONES... STUCK AN OLD BUTCHER KNIFE IN A TREE ABOUT 4 FEET FROM THE GROUND, BROKE THE HANDLE OFF, AN' LEFT IT POINTIN' TUH THE MOUTH OF THE HOLE!

WITH A FINAL EFFORT, REYNOLDS SKETCHED A CRUDE MAP-- BUT BROWN WAS KILLED OFF BY A POSSE BEFORE HE COULD FIND THE TREASURE! AND YEARS LATER, WHEN GENERAL COOK CAME IN POSSESSION OF REYNOLDS' MAP--

THERE IS NO QUESTION BUT THAT THE TREASURE IS STILL HIDDEN IN THE MOUNTAINS... AND SOMEONE MAY YET BE FORTUNATE ENOUGH TO FIND IT!

BUT NO ONE HAS FOUND IT YET-- AND THE BURIED TREASURE IS STILL THERE, PERHAPS WAITING FOR YOU, READER!

PERFECT SHOT

"SHERIFF, YUH CAN'T go through with this!" one of the townsmen said violently. "Yuh know that Killer Barton's faster on the draw than yuh are...yuh'll jest end up, as another notch on that coyote's .44!"

A murmur of assent ran around the group of ranchers and townsmen crowded into Sheriff Rusty Miller's small office. The sheriff had been hearing talk like this for the last half-hour, ever since Killer Barton had sent in the message that he'd be waiting for Rusty Miller at the edge of town at dusk...and if Miller didn't show up, the message added, Barton and his gang would shoot up and burn all the outlying, isolated ranch-houses.

But now the sheriff was tired of hearing all the words of caution from the townsmen, and standing up and glaring at them, he said, "I'm a-goin' out thar...an' that's all thar is tuh it! We don't have a big enough posse in town tuh tangle with Barton's gang...so whether it's suicide or not, I'm gonna meet 'im alone! If I win, mebbe his gang'll break up an' scatter...an' if I lose, mebbe Barton'll be satisfied an' leave without botherin' them outlyin' ranchers. An' now ... clear outa here ... all of yuh!"

The townsmen reluctantly shuffled out, closing the door behind them...and the sheriff took down his twin holsters from the wall and buckled them around his waist. As he hefted the two long-barreled .44's in his hands, a flood of remembrance swept over him. These were the guns he had used in his youth, when he had trailed along with his dad's two-bit carnival. It was his father, a famous marksman in his day, who had taught Rusty how to draw and shoot...just as he had taught Rusty's friend, Hank Barton.

The two of them, Rusty and Hank, had become two of the best shots in the West, putting on trick shooting performances for the carny. But Hank had always been a shade faster than Rusty...as he proved the day he held up the carnival, stole the whole season's receipts, killed Rusty's dad...and outdrew Rusty himself, shooting the guns right out of his hands. After that, Barton became Killer Barton, head of a gang of ruthless gunmen...while Rusty went on to become a sheriff, always proclaiming that he would get his father's killer some day.

And the proclamations had worked...for apparently Barton had heard of them, and had returned to challenge the sheriff...which was just what Rusty had been praying for.

An hour later, as the sun dipped over the western horizon, Sheriff Rusty Miller rode grimly to meet the killer who was waiting for him.

"Start drawin' any time yuh want tuh, sheriff," Barton called as soon as they got within shouting distance. Rusty didn't answer him, but drew slowly nearer...nearer. When the two men were within .44 shooting range, and Rusty still hadn't drawn, Barton sneered, "What's the matter, sheriff...don't yuh trust yore eyesight or yore .44's anymore?"

Rusty merely kept on riding closer, closer...and when the two men were a scant twenty paces apart, the sheriff saw a frown of suspicion cross Barton's face. That was when Rusty made his move, darting his hand down to his gun. A brief moment later, two guns barked...but it was Barton who slumped to the ground, a bullet in his heart. And as Barton's demoralized gunmen broke and scattered, Rusty said grimly to the dead man, "Thanks fer lettin' me git intuh .38 shootin' distance, yuh varmint! Yuh see, I didn't use muh long-barreled .44's, but a short-barreled .38...because a short barrel draws a shade faster'n a long one...jest enough tuh shade yuh!"

Desperate GAMBLE

LYING THERE ON the floor of the crude mountain cabin, bound hand and foot, Bobby Turner grinned to himself as he saw his guard beginning to doze off. "He probably thinks he doesn't have to watch a 14-year-old kid too close," Bobby thought. "But I'll show 'im---as soon as he starts snorin'!"

The gunman sat in the chair on the other side of the cabin, next to the door, his rifle lying in his lap---and when the guard's chin slumped down on his chest, and snores began emanating from the tobacco-stained mouth, Bobby started to move.

Wriggling and twisting across the floor, Bobby finally reached the rusty nail protruding from one of the rickety cabin's boards. The nail was a few inches above the floor, so it wasn't too difficult for Bobby to bring his bonds against it. After ten minutes of diligent, cautious sawing, his hands were free---and then he swiftly and silently untied the ropes around his legs.

Stealing up to the sleeping guard, Bobby reached for the man's six-gun and began drawing it slowly, very slowly, from its well-oiled holster. Once the guard stirred, and Bobby froze, holding his breath, his heart racing with fear. But the snores didn't stop, and finally the revolver was free of the holster.

CRACK!

The gunman slumped to the floor without a sound as the gunbutt came smashing down on his skull. Then Bobby was stealing quietly out of the door, looking towards the lighted window of the other cabin twenty yards away, where the other three gangmen who had kidnaped him were playing cards and drinking. They apparently hadn't heard a thing, and Bobby ran in a half-crouch to the horses tethered to the trees at the edge of the mountain clearing.

There were four horses, and one of them was the magnificent white stallion that belonged to Slade McCoy, the leader of the gang. Bobby knew that he could handle any of the other three horses more easily, but he also knew how proud McCoy was of that stallion---and the thought crossed the boy's mind that perhaps the gang leader wouldn't let his men fire at the stallion when the sound of hooves gave the escape away.

Murmuring softly to the white stallion, Bobby mounted him bareback---he couldn't risk hunting for McCoy's saddle---and then dug his heels savagely into the animal's flanks.

The tattoo of flying hooves was heard in the cabin, and Spade McCoy sprang to the window. "Wha---it's the kid---on my hoss!"

The other two men drew their guns. "Shoot 'im down," one cried, "or we'll never git the ransom money from old banker Turner!"

"Hold yore fire!" shouted McCoy. "Yuh might hit Whitey---an' I'll kill the man who even wings muh hoss! The kid can't git away---he's headin' up Dead End Canyon---I reckon he doesn't know this part o' the Rockies! After 'im---on the other hosses!"

Twenty minutes later, Bobby reined the white stallion up sharply as he saw the sheer cliff-walls dead ahead. Behind him sounded the clatter of hooves on the rocky ground, but Bobby didn't have any choice---he couldn't go forward, so he had to go back! Wheeling the stallion around, Bobby made his desperate decision---and spurred the horse into a gallop straight at the on-rushing gangmen. The outlaws halted in consternation as they saw the white juggernaut hurtling toward them---and before McCoy could countermand his order about not shooting at the horse, their own horses reared up in fear, throwing the gangmen beneath the flashing, slashing white hooves that trampled them into insensibility.

Bobby's desperate gamble had paid off---and he'd gained a magnificent white stallion in the bargain!

GOLD TOWN & GHOST TOWN

TYPICAL OF THE MANY FABULOUS GOLD STRIKES IN THE OLD WEST WAS THE ONE MADE IN 1859 BY A HUNTER, BUCKSKIN JOE HARRIS, NEAR THE SOURCE OF THE SOUTH PLATTE RIVER IN THE MOSQUITO RANGE OF COLORADO!

CERTAIN OF HAVING WOUNDED THE DEER, THE PUZZLED HUNTER WENT TO SEARCH FOR TRACES OF BLOOD ON THE GROUND WHERE THE ANIMAL HAD STOOD...

YUP, THAR'S DROPS O' BLOOD... AN'-- AN' SOMETHIN' ELSE!

GOLD-- NUGGETS O' PURE GOLD-- RIGHT ON THE SURFACE-- I--I'M RICH!

YES, BUCKSKIN JOE HAD STUMBLED ON A LODE AS RICH AS ANY EVER DISCOVERED-- A THICK GOLD DEPOSIT RIGHT AT THE VERY GRASS ROOTS! HARRIS WORKED IT LIKE A STONE QUARRY, AND GOLD POURED FROM HIS MINE IN SUCH QUANTITIES THAT HIS CABIN WAS FILLED WITH IT-- EVERYTHING IN SIGHT STUFFED WITH THE PURE YELLOW METAL, EVEN HIS OLD BOOTS!

ALMOST OVERNIGHT A TOWN NAMED "BUCKSKIN JOE" SPRANG UP NEAR THE SITE OF THE MINE, WITH 5,000 MINERS CROWDING ITS STREETS AND RIOTING THERE AT NIGHT! SOON THE GOLD TOWN HAD THREE LUXURIOUS DANCE HALLS, A THEATRE, A BANK, SEVERAL QUARTZ MILLS-- AND A LOOK OF PERMANENCY, AS IF THE TOWN WERE THERE TO STAY!

BUT "BUCKSKIN JOE" HAD NEVER BEEN MORE THAN A ONE-MINE TOWN, AND WHEN THE STREAM OF GOLD ABRUPTLY CEASED AND THE BOOM COLLAPSED COMPLETELY, THE TOWN DEPOPULATED ABOUT AS FAST AS IT HAD BEEN BUILT-- ALMOST OVERNIGHT! BUCKSKIN JOE HIMSELF, HAVING SQUANDERED ALL HIS MONEY, WAS FINALLY FORCED TO ABANDON HIS GHOST TOWN IN 1868-- AND DRIFTED AWAY PENNILESS, NEVER TO BE HEARD FROM AGAIN!

The END

BANTAM BUCKAROO

YOU NEEDN'T EVER GO LOOKING FOR THE BANTAM BUCKAROO, PARDNER!
